Mayor Of N.Y. Bars American Nazi Party Rally, Calls Leader "A Half-Penny Hitler"

The American Nazi party was denied the right to hold a rally in Union Square, in New York, on July 4. The decision was made by Mayor Wagner, who said the organization's purpose was to incite a riot by preaching "race hatred and violence."

The Mayor made the statement at City Hall shortly after George Lincoln Rockwell, of Arlington, Va., and Washington, D. C., the party's leader, had been mobbed in the rotunda of the State Supreme Court Building in Foley Square.

Mr. Rockwell had appeared at a hearing before Justice Vincent A. Lupiano to defend his application for a permit to hold the July 4 meeting, says the New York Times. The disorder, nearly reaching the proportions of a riot, occurred during a five-minute recess when Mr. Rockwell showed up in the rotunda for television interviews.

He was greeted by shouts and curses from about 150 persons, some of them wearing veterans' overseas caps. Television cameras were tipped over and several persons were knocked to the ground as members of the crowd tried to hit the Nazi party leader. A riot call to Police Headquarters soon brought sixteen patrolmen and two sergeants to the scene.

However, court security guards crowded around Mr. Rockwell and he was hustled into "protective custody" in a room off the rotunda. Later, he was whisked off under a police escort into a taxicab after appearing briefly when the court resumed. It was reported later that a special detail of detectives escorted him to La Guardia Airport where he left for Washington at 1:10 P.M.

It was almost precisely at that moment that Newbold Morris, the recently appointed Commissioner of Parks, arrived at City Hall for a conference with Mayor Wagner. Mr. Morris had indicated several days before that he would grant a permit for the Nazi meeting unless the Police Department advised against it. Mr. Morris had taken his stand on Constitutional provisions of freedom of speech.

More than 100 patrolmen were guarding City Hall when Mr. Morris entered into a closed conference with the Mayor, reports the New York Times. Also present at that meeting were Abe Stark, president of the City Council; Charles H. Tenney, the Corporation Counsel; Acting Police Commissioner James R. Kennedy; and Warren Moscow, assistant to the Mayor.

The conference lasted for about fifteen minutes. When it was over, Mayor Wagner held a press conference in his office. Declaring that he was speaking as the Mayor and chief magistrate of the city, Mr. Wagner then read the following statement:

"I have the primary and overwhelming obligation to the people of the city for the maintenance of law and order. A man named George Rockwell of Washington, D. C., has applied for a permit to speak in Union Square on July 4. Information supplied to me by qualified sources shows clearly that Mr. Rockwell's intent is to incite a riot by preaching, in a city where people of all races live peacefully together, a philosophy of race hatred and extermination by violence.

"Left to their own devices, the people of the city will stone Rockwell out of town. There is not a decent responsible citizen in the city who would follow him in his preaching. There are millions who have friends and relatives who died because of this race hatred either as unarmed victims or soldiers fighting for freedom.

"We have in this city the largest and best police force of any municipality. It can quell any riot; but no police force in the world can stop a riot from starting. In this case, every fact we have shows Rockwell's presence as a preacher of race hatred will cause a riot the police will have to quell.

"This is an invitation to riot and disorder from a half-penny Hitler. The invitation is declined. Mr. Rockwell will not speak here on the Fourth of July or any other time in terms of race hatred and race extermination."

As the Mayor spoke, 150 county and post commanders of the Jewish War Veterans from all parts of the state marched on Park Row east of City Hall Park. Several were in his office when he read his statement, and when he finished they shook his hand and congratulated him enthusiastically.

Earlier, in the court hearing, Mr. Rockwell said that the American Nazi party was "growing every minute" and that it now had thirty members, says the New York Times. The party leader objected to being called a "fuehrer." He said he was the "commandant" and has chosen the Nazi label in order to "shock" the American people into an awareness of the danger of Communism.

Mr. Rockwell, who is 41 years old and a former Navy aviator, said his goals had been misrepresented by newspapers; that his party did not want to exterminate anyone but Communists, and that he had spent $4,000 of his own money to "awaken the American people" but so far had not been very successful.

Last February 8 Mr. Rockwell was discharged from the Naval Reserve. The Navy said that it had accepted the recommendation of a four-man naval review board to discharge Mr. Rockwell, who held the rank of commander in the Reserve.

The announcement said that the discharge was because of Mr. Rockwell's "civilian activities." It did not say what type of discharge had been issued. However, Mr. Rockwell said the discharge was honorable. About a month before his discharge, Mr. Rockwell opened his headquarters for the American Nazi party in Arlington.

A suit was filed in State Supreme Court to keep the city from issuing a permit to the American Nazi party to hold a July 4 rally in Union Square. The Public Awareness Society, through its president, Harry Sadow, filed the suit, charging that the Nazi group sought to overthrow the American system of government and that any rally it held would "lead to riot and bloodshed."

The society obtained an order from Justice Vincent A. Lupiano directing Park Commissioner Newbold Morris to appear to explain why he should not be prohibited from issuing a permit to the Nazi group, headed by George Lincoln Rockwell, of Arlington, Va. Meanwhile, protests against the Nazi group continued to pour into City Hall and newspaper offices.

The Emma Lazarus Federation of Jewish Women's Clubs and the Farband Labor Zionist Order joined a half dozen other organizations that have called upon, the city to refuse the group a permit, says the New York Times. The Federation said, "We must not allow the resurgence of Hitlerism here or elsewhere."

In addition, the Mutual Radio Network reported that many listeners had called to protest after the network had carried an interview with Mr. Rockwell in which he was quoted as saying the aim of the Nazi group was to "exterminate unfriendly Jews" and "send Negroes back to Africa."

Protests continued to mount against efforts by the American Nazi party to conduct the political rally in Union Square July 4.

Archaeologist, 60, Honored For Holy Land Research

The sixtieth birthday of the scholar, Dr. Nelson Glueck, Biblical archaeologist, and president of Hebrew Union College-Jewish Institute of Religion, theological seminary for Reform Judaism, was celebrated by friends and associates at the Officers' Club in the Naval Shipyard in Brooklyn, N. Y. The seminary, America's oldest institution of Reform Judaism, which was founded by the late Rabbi Isaac Mayer Wise, has its main campus in Cincinnati, Ohio, with institutions in New York and in Los Angeles, Cal.

An audience of 250 persons paid tribute to Dr. Glueck as a leader and as an archaeologist whose activities in the Holy Land cover almost thirty years, says the New York Times. In that time, Dr. Glueck has adhered to one principle: to discover sites to bring alive with clarity and beauty the truth of the Bible. One of his discoveries was King Solomon's copper mines in 1934, which are described in Deuteronomy, as a "land whose stones are of iron and out of whose hills thou mayest dig brass." For the record, the Israeli Government has built a smeltering works on the site.

Dr. Glueck's latest "conquest" is the Hebrew Union College center, now nearing completion in Jerusalem. "It will be a center," he said, "for the practice of Liberal Judaism and, equally important, a center for archaeological research and study. It will be the only one of its kind in the Holy Land."

Despite opposition of Orthodox Judaism, the dominating religious force in Israel, Dr. Glueck convinced authorities that such a center was needed. The center will have a chapel for those devoted to Reform Judaism. Dr. William F. Albright, noted archaeologist, will direct the center's academic activities. Dr. Albright was Dr. Glueck's archaeological mentor and predecessor as director of the American Schools of Oriental Research now on the Jordan side of the Holy Land.

Dr. Glueck, a native of Cincinnati, was graduated from the University of Cincinnati, and was ordained a Rabbi at Hebrew Union College in 1923. He assumed the presidency of Hebrew Union College in 1948 when it merged with the Jewish Institute of Religion.

At the dinner, he was greeted with an ovation. Dr. Walter Consuelo Langsam, president of the University of Cincinnati, presented Dr. Glueck with a birthday citation, says the New York Times. Robert P. Goldman, chairman of the Seminary's board of governors, and Emil N. Baar, chairman of the board of trustees of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, were among the speakers.

Dr. Julius Mark, senior Rabbi of Congregation Emanu-El, Fifth Avenue and Sixty-fifth Street, gave Dr. Glueck a silver-plated, specially bound copy of the archaeologist's book, "Rivers in the Desert." The book summarizes dis-

Czech Refugee Banker Was Figure In U. S. Industry

Hans Wyman, a millionaire Czechoslovak refugee who made a rapid success as an industrialist in the United States, died of a heart attack in his home, 944 Fifth Avenue, N.Y., just before his 75th birthday. Mr. Wyman was president of the Pentasote Company in Passaic, N. J., manufacturers of plastics, and the H. O. Canfield Company, Bridgeport, Conn., rubber supplies. He also had been active in many large-scale financial investments.

Mr. Wyman was a handsome member of a family of prominent industrialists, says the New York Times. He was a leader in Czechoslovakia in the coal and steel industries and a director of the Bohemian Union Bank and of the Dresdner Bank.

Although Mr. Wyman and his sons lost to the Nazis in 1939 an industrial empire in Central Europe that embraced coal, textiles, chemicals and real estate, they still retained considerable working capital when they came to the United States in 1941. Awaiting them in New York was a large portfolio of British and American securities that had eluded the Nazi regime.

Since 1942 the Wymans had spent more than half a million dollars to gain control of two small concerns, the Pentasote Leather Company, and the H. O. Canfield Company. The companies, which were failing financially, were soon converted into profitable enterprises.

Mr. Wyman married the former Maria Jaray after his first wife, the former Stella Parnas, died in 1951. Besides his widow, he leaves three sons and a daughter from his first marriage. They are Charles A. Wyman, of New York; Henry W. Wyman, of Purchase, N. Y.; Ralph Wyman, of Greenwich, Conn.; and Mrs. Harry A. Russell, of New York; and twelve grandchildren.

Boy, 16, Tops 150,000 From 5,200 High Schools, In Mathematics Contest

For the second consecutive year, a New York City student and a city high school have won top honors in a leading mathematics contest, Harry J. Saal, a 16-year-old senior at Midwood High School in Brooklyn, took individual honors in the competition sponsored by the Mathematics Association of America and the Society of Actuaries.

Brooklyn Technical High School took first place in the school category for a second year in a row and the third time in the eleven-year history of the contest, says the New York Times. One hundred and fifty thousand students from 5,200 high schools in the United States, American Samoa, Guam, the Canal Zone, and Canada participated in this year's contest.

City students took three of the first six individual places, while city schools took four of the first six places in the team contest. Team results were based on the total scores of the three highest scoring students from each school.

The contest consisted of fifty questions based on the concepts and skills associated with plane and simple coordinate geometry, elementary and intermediate algebra, arithmetic, and informal space notions.

Brooklyn Technical High School's winning score was 382 out of a possible 450 points. Teaneck Senior High School in New Jersey was second with 362 points; followed by the Bronx High School of Science, 354.50 points; Stuyvesant High School in Manhattan, 353.25 points; Celeste High School, in Celeste, Texas, 351.50 points; and Midwood, 321.75 points.

Brooklyn Technical, Bronx High School of Science, and Stuyvesant are special schools, which have selected enrollments drawn from all parts of the city, says the New York Times. Midwood is a neighborhood high school.

In addition to young Saal, who scored 138.75 points out of a possible 150, other city students who finished high in the contest were Herman Bilenko and Steven Richter, both of Brooklyn Technical High School. They finished fifth and sixth, with scores of 132.5 and 131.25, respectively. Last year David M. Segal, then a senior at Brooklyn Technical, took first place with a perfect score, as the city schools won the top three team and individual honors.

Harry Saal, this year's high scorer, is the son of an orthopedic surgeon. He lives at 786 East Nineteenth Street in the Flatbush section of Brooklyn. He hopes to be a research mathematician or a physicist.

In addition to his high school studies, he attends classes in Russian three afternoons each week at Brooklyn College and devotes Saturdays to a special honors program for gifted high school science students at Columbia University. He will enroll at Columbia College next fall.

Interested in science for as long as he can remember, Harry received a ham radio operator's license when he was 13 years old.

The mathematics contest was conducted among ten geographical regions. In the local region, which covered metropolitan New York and New Jersey, city public schools took six of the first seven places, says the New York Times. In addition to the four national leaders, Abraham Lincoln High School and Erasmus Hall High School won honors locally.

FREEDHOFF-GOODMAN

The marriage of Miss Helen Goodman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sholom Goodman, 167 Arlington Avenue, to Stephen Hart Freedhoff, son of Dr. and Mrs. Samuel O. Freedhoff, 12 Laurelcrest Avenue, was solemnized on Tuesday, June 21, at six o'clock, in Shaarei Shomayim Synagogue, by Rabbi Walter Wurzburger, assisted by Cantor Nathan Adler. The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her gown of silk organza was designed with a pointed basque bodice; a cummerbund; and a chapel train. Eyelet embroidered fleurettes trimmed the scalloped neckline, and were repeated throughout the gown. Her waist-length veil was caught to a coronet of seed-pearl-beads; and she carried a bible with a bouquet of pink Sweetheart roses and lilies of the valley. Mrs. Aubrey E. Golden, sister of the groom, was matron of honour, and Miss Shirley Pasternak was the bridesmaid. Each wore a gown of pink organza; with hat to match; and carried a basket filled with pink and American Beauty roses. Dr. Harvey Moldofsky was the best man. The ushers were: Aubrey Golden, brother-in-law of the groom; Irving and David Goodman, brothers of the bride; Daniel Rotenberg, Orest Rudzek, and Lionel White. The altar and canopy were decorated with standards of pink and American Beauty roses. At a dinner in the Synagogue three hundred guests were received. Mrs. Goodman, mother of the bride, wore a pale mauve organza gown, which had a sheath skirt; and a scooped neckline. Her hat was of that colour. Mrs. Freedhoff, mother of the groom, wore a pale pink, silk organza gown, which had a bouffant skirt; and a scooped neckline; and her hat matched it. Each had a mauve orchid corsage. Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Freedhoff spent their wedding trip on a motor trip to California. They will reside at 10 Spadina Road. Here for the marriage were: Rabbi Perry Nussbaum, of Jacksonville, Missouri; Mrs. Clara Mehlman, of London, England, aunt of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. Herman Kohl, and Mr. and Mrs. Hyman Kirshener, of Flushing, N.Y., and Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Benatovitch, of Buffalo, N.Y.

REEDS-ISAACS

The marriage of Miss Elizabeth-Ann Isaacs, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Ralph Isaacs, 21 Orange Street, Saint John, to Robert T. Reeds, son of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Reeds, of Montebello, Cal., took place at Sharei Zedek Synagogue, on Sunday, June 26, at one o'clock. Rabbi David Spiro, of Fredericton, officiated. The bride was given in marriage by her father. She was gowned in antique ivory satin, made with a broad neckline trimmed with guipure lace; long sleeves pointed at the wrists; and a full skirt with a chapel train. Her elbow-length veil of tulle illusion was caught to a tiny coronet of satin like her gown, and she carried a nosegay of white orchids and stephanotis. Mrs. Jerry Weisbach, sister of the bride, was matron of honour, and Miss Susan Isaacs, her other sister, was bridesmaid. Their gowns were made alike, Mrs. Weisbach in melon shade, and Miss Isaacs in blue. Each wore silk organza, with heart-shaped neckline, inset with white pleated silk organza; cap sleeves; and bell-shaped skirt; and a hat fashioned like a flower of the same material. They carried small sprays of stephanotis and glamilia in shades to match their gowns. Dr. Jerry A. Weisbach, brother-in-law of the bride, of Wilmington, Delaware, was best man; and David Jordan, of Valley Stream, N. Y., was usher. The junior ushers were: Lyle Isaacs and Barry Citren. The ceremony took place under a bower of greenery and cut flowers. The Synagogue was decorated with melon-colored gladioli, white snapdragons, and lighter white tapers in wrought iron standards. James M. MacGowan played the organ. Following the ceremony, a reception and luncheon took place at the Admiral Beatty Hotel. The toast to the bride was proposed by Dr. Jerry Weisbach, brother-in-law of the bride. Mrs. Isaacs, mother of the bride, wore a brown lace and silk organza gown. She carried a rosy-pink cymbidium orchid. Mr. and Mrs. Robert T. Reeds, spent their wedding trip motoring to Fundy Park, en route to the New England States, the Berkshire Mountains, and Cape Cod, Mass., the bride going away in a gray silk organza dress, with matching gray and white checked coat. They have taken up residence at Cuthbert Manor, Westmount, N. J. The bride is a graduate of Saint John High School, and a recent graduate of Brandeis University, and will attend Drexel Institute in the fall. The groom is a graduate of the University of California, at Berkeley, with an engineering degree, and is associated with the Radio Corporation of America. Here for the marriage were: Miss H. Ruth Isaacs, of New York, aunt of the bride; I. Sidney Isaacs, of Montreal, Que., great-uncle of the bride; Dr. and Mrs. Jerry A. Weisbach, brother-in-law and sister of the bride, of Wilmington, Delaware; and David Jordan, of New York.

Just A Young Jew Who Died Saving Four Moslem Children

A young Jew who died saving the lives of four Moslem children was one of three fatalities in a flash flood that devastated the desert town of Gabes, Tunisia, some time ago. The other victims were a 17-year-old girl and a small child. Their deaths received scant attention in the reports of the disaster which appeared in the Tunis paper, La Presse. The young man was referred to merely as "a young Israelite". And since there were only three lives lost, the disaster received little publicity outside of Tunisia.

The young Jew's act was reported, however, in an eyewitness account written by a local representative of the Joint Distribution Committee, which aids thousands of Tunisian Jews with funds provided by the United Jewish Appeal. He was on the spot with another staff member within 48 hours with a car full of food, blankets, and clothing for the 58 Jewish families in Gabes left destitute by the flood. His report of the relief operation was forwarded in due course to headquarters in Geneva. The flood, wrote the JDC man, was an unprecedented event in dusty palm-crested Gabes.

Nothing like it had happened in a hundred years, a 97-year-old inhabitant told him. Lying on the Mediterranean coast 250 miles south of Tunis, Gabes sprawls like a sleepy cat on a seaside plain under the blazing Sahara sun. It is an outpost on the edge of the desert, the last stop on the railroad from Tunis. A fair-sized town, it has a population of over 22,000 and its shops, public buildings, and houses blend French, Arab, and modern influences. Most of the Jewish families are poor and live in the Arab quarter, with its flat-roofed dwellings, arcaded courts, and narrow twisting streets.

North of the town a wadi, or watercourse, runs across the plain to the sea. Normally almost dry, it is flanked by a dirt embankment built to check erosion from the infrequent rains. It was this embankment that gave way under the combined pressure of a high tide from the sea and the runoff from an exceptionally heavy rainstorm. The downpour began the night of October 2 and continued through the morning of the next day. A little after two o'clock in the afternoon the embankment broke, letting loose a torrent of mud and water from the wadi. The silt-laden water surged through the town like a battering-ram, uprooting trees, knocking down walls, sweeping crates, barrels, all kinds of debris on its crest.

School had just let out and most of the children were already on their way home. Some of the stragglers were picked up by a truck of soldiers stationed nearby. But four Moslem youngsters were caught in the schoolyard when the wall around it broke and the courtyard was inundated. It was a lucky chance for them that the young Jew was on hand to aid them. When he saw they were in danger, he ran into the courtyard, shouting a warning. He herded them over to the building and lifted them up to a window sill. When the water broke over them, he shielded them with his body, hanging onto the iron grille with all his strength.

He called across the water to the truck and the soldiers threw out a line. After several attempts it caught on the iron grating. One by one the children were pulled to safety. When his turn came, the young Jew grasped the rope and threw himself into the water. But as he jumped he was swept against a tree and killed. He left behind him his wife, two children, and a sick, aging father. His wife was pregnant again. The family is being taken care of, of course, the Jewish Benevolent Society of Gabes has been looking after them. The community gave him the best funeral possible under the circumstances and perhaps one day the people of Gabes may do something more.

But then again, they may not. It's a poor community. And he wasn't anyone special, just a young Jew who died so that four children of another faith might live.

Marriage And Divorce In Israel

BY AARON ZWERDLING, OF JERUSALEM

Israel belongs to those few countries in which marriage and divorce are governed almost exclusively by religious law. This had been so under Ottoman rule and during the British Mandate; at those times the jurisdiction of the Rabbinical Courts over marriage, divorce, and other matters of personal status was important also for political reasons because it strengthened the autonomy of the Jewish community of Palestine.

The "Law on Rabbinical Jurisdiction (Marriage and Divorce) 1953," which is in effect today, reaffirmed and consolidated the previous position. The law provides that "Matters of marriage and divorce regarding Jews in Israel who are citizens or who are residents, though not being citizens, shall be in the jurisdiction of the Rabbinical Courts. Marriage and divorce of Jews shall be governed by the law of the Torah." This means a complete recognition of Jewish religious law.

The precepts of the Torah, their interpretation and extension by the Talmud and Shulchan Aruch, are the law of the land. The impediments and regulations established by ritual law have been recognized by the state. Thus a Kohen may not marry a divorced woman; and the ancient institution of Levirate marriage is fully recognized: unless formally released by the surviving brother of her late husband, a widow may not remarry.

Intermarriage between Jews and non-Jews is not possible. This has concerned many people in Israel who are disturbed by the fact that people abroad will regard this as an unworthy anachronism. The bars to intermarriage have fallen long ago in many enlightened countries and it distresses many Israelis that Israel will be thought lagging in this respect. But it should be noted that this regulation against intermarriage is not absolute. A non-Jew, for example, is at liberty to embrace the Jewish faith and to marry a Jew afterwards.

Moreover, civil courts of Israel recognize a marriage between a Jew and non-Jew as valid, if it was valid according to the law of the country where it had been concluded. This is most important for the numerous mixed couples among the new immigrants from some Eastern European countries, particularly with regard to matters of inheritance. The religious courts do not regard such couples as married — because Jewish religious law does not recognize intermarriage — but in the normal course of affairs such couples need not apply to the Rabbinical Courts. If an Israeli Jew wants to marry a non-Jew he can do so abroad without permanently injuring his status as a resident of Israel.

Although marriage and divorce are in principle governed by the law of the Torah, the secular legislation of the State of Israel has made some important inroads in this area. The minimum age for marriage according to Jewish religious law is 13 years for the groom and 12 years for the bride — and even less, provided the bride's father consents. Now the 1950 "Law of the Age of Marriage" decrees that whoever marries a girl under the age of 17, or assists in such marriages, or permits the marriage of his daughter or ward under 17, is guilty of a criminal offense.

The marriage itself is not void because it is valid according to religious law. However, the young age of the bride gives her the right to petition, if she so desires, for the dissolution of the marriage. Incidentally, the law is likely to be amended and the minimum age of the bride reduced to 16 years.

A person who commits bigamy is guilty of a crime under Israel law, irrespective of sex or religion, although bigamy and polygamy are not forbidden by the law of the Torah. The well known medieval injunction against polygamy by Rabbanu Gershom was not accepted by the Oriental Jewish communities. The Yemenites and the Kurds, for example, have been practicing polygamy to this day. Thus, again, modern secular law in Israel has prohibited what is permitted by the religious law of some Jewish communities.

It is well known that Jewish law on divorce is most liberal in one important aspect: it recognizes divorce by mere mutual agreement of the parties. In most countries the rigors of the divorce law have forced the parties to conspire to obtain a divorce. Apart from divorce obtained on the basis of mutual agreement, the religious court may order the husband to "give the wife a 'get'", and the wife to receive it, on the grounds, among others, of desertion, adultery, grave contagious diseases, anti-social behavior, and apostasy.

However, the function of the Rabbinical Court in matters of divorce is different from that of a civil court: it does not dissolve the marriage but only supervises the steps taken by the parties to effect that result, ascertaining that the issuance and the receipt of the "get" be in accordance with religious law. If the husband refuses to give the "get" or the wife to receive it, religious law does not allow the Court to declare the marriage as dissolved. It may only bring oral and indirect pressure to bear on the recalcitrant partner. Now, according to Israel law, the civil court may enforce compliance with the order of the Rabbinical Court by committing to prison the party who refuses to obey.

Despite the fact that the state has entered the marriage-divorce area, the controversy on optional civil marriage and divorce continues in Israel. Nobody suggests that a civil ceremony should be made obligatory, but there are many who propose that whoever wishes should be allowed to marry before some government official authorized to perform the marriage ceremony, and to be divorced by a civil court. Those advocating optional civil marriages and divorces argue that it amounts to a violation of the freedom of conscience to coerce people into undergoing religious ceremonies which are devoid of meaning to them.

The main argument adduced by the other side is "the unity of the Jewish people." The proponents of this view argue that if some Jews are enabled to contract marriages regarded by other Jews as null and void, this could create a bitter split among the Jewish people. The opponents of civil marriage and divorce have so far prevailed and the present position is unlikely to change within the near future, and certainly not as long as a religious party is represented in the government, because Orthodox groups feel very strongly about this issue and are determined not to permit a change of the status quo.

While on this subject of marriage and divorce it is interesting to observe certain facts that emerge from the statistics in Israel. They refute, for example, the widespread notion that members of kibbutzim (settlements) marry and divorce recklessly. Statistics show that the ratio of divorce in 1957 was 1.4 percent of marriage in the kibbutzim as against 1.7 percent in Tel Aviv and Haifa.

But much more interesting are the figures which illuminate how Mizug Galuyot — the amalgamation of the various communities into one homogenous nation — is proceeding by means of "mixed marriages." In 1957 there were 1,259 marriages between grooms of European or American descent and brides of Oriental origin. In 590 cases the groom was of Asian or African descent and the bride Ashkenazic. This means that of 12.8 percent of all the marriages in 1957 the partners married "out of their community" and that in two out of three "mixed marriages" the groom was of Western and the bride of Oriental origin.

These marriages have proved to be at least as stable as those contracted within the same community. Of the 2,076 marriages dissolved in 1957, only 171 or 8.1 percent had been "mixed ones."

● SHAAREI TEFILLAH ●

Synagogue, William Herskowitz, Rabbi: Bais Yehuda Congregation, one of the oldest in Toronto; and Shaarei Tefillah, one of the newest, celebrated the formal signing of an amalgamation agreement at a cocktail party in the latter Synagogue. A. Bergson, president of Shaarei Tefillah; and Jack L. Kerbel, president of the Bais Yehuda, signed the documents, ending the separate existence of their respective synagogues and creating a new corporate body. The congregation, to be called Shaarei Tefillah — Bais Yehuda, will have a membership of five hundred families and will be located in the Shaarei Tefillah buildings at 3600 Bathurst Street. Rabbi Herskowitz voluntarily relinquished his post so that his close personal friend, Rabbi Bernard Rosensweig, who has seniority in terms of service and is a native Torontonian, can be the leader in September. Rabbi Herskowitz, a native New Yorker, who has served Shaarei Tefillah for the past five years will return to his home city. Science Is Transforming Israel

BY ABBA EBAN, PRESIDENT OF THE WEIZMANN INSTITUTE OF SCIENCE; RECENTLY ELECTED HONORARY MEMBER OF THE AMERICAN ACADEMY OF ARTS AND SCIENCES

Each year, a hundred thousand visitors from Israel and abroad find their way to Rehovoth. As they walk across our lawns, and through our buildings, and pay homage at Dr. Weizmann's grave, they fall captive to a sentiment compounded both of gentleness and awe. It is probable that few amongst them have a clear knowledge of what is involved in fundamental scientific research. But their image of Israel's nationhood is indelibly marked by what they witness here. By his very existence, the scientific worker gives his nation an atmosphere of intellectual discipline, truth, and spiritual integrity. A national society which contains such men, however few, is different in its essential nature from a national society in which such men do not live and work. In Israel's renascent life the Weizmann Institute of Science is a factor of transformation, not merely of adornment.

It is only now, at the outset of our Institute's second decade, that its centrality in Israel's life is becoming manifest throughout our nation and the world. The vision of its founder belongs more to Israel's national future than seemed to be the case a few years ago. Between the blinding flash at Hiroshima and the surge of man's groping fingers into outer space, our generation has come to learn much about the primacy of science and its life and destiny. The orderliness of nature is the largest of all certainties; yet few men could have predicted a generation ago how the insights and conclusions of laboratories would transform the lives of men, the conditions of their inter-relationship and indeed the very contours of their knowledge. In this sense, the influence of Rehovoth on Israel's future is still incalculable.

As the second decade advances, the role of scientific research in Israel's future will become even more pervasive than hitherto. Our economic planning accords an increasing weight to industrial development. The perfection of industrial products, especially in a world where publicity and competition create constant obsolescence, can only be achieved by a close alliance between science and industry. There will be a greater market for scientific research workers, both fundamental and applied, than is to be found through their absorption in academic institutions. In plastics, electronics, and plant genetics, the Institute has already crossed the somewhat blurred line dividing fundamental research from its application.

At the same time it is clear that scientific research and application rank high amongst the fields in which Israel is destined to cooperate with other nations. The scientific movement of our age is not the monopoly of the established scientific centers in the West. Israel may be destined to become the meeting-place in which the contemporary scientific movement intersects with the national liberation movements of the neighboring continents.

The political and juridical inequalities which used to exist between nations in the West and the East are disappearing fast. But the differences in levels of knowledge and of technical and economic progress could create tensions, envies and rancors no less sharp. Israel is an instructive example of a pioneering community starting out from austerity and economic hardship, but nevertheless achieving an honorable place in the world's scientific community and vigilantly using the scientific method in the solution of her urgent material problems. The eager response, both of eminent scientists and of leaders of developing nations, to the invitation to attend our 1960 International Conference indicates how strongly the need of this encounter is felt on both sides.

Our nation stands at a crossroad not only in geography but also in the world of ideas. Access to modern science and technology and devotion to political democracy mark us as a Western nation. But we are an African-Asian people by geographical fortune, as well as in terms of our recent national freedom, and our need to struggle hard against scarcities and handicaps. Perhaps no other nation in the world is more strongly marked by this fruitful duality.

Here in the heart of the Middle East at the point where Africa, Asia, and Europe converge, there has arisen a young State which has realized since the beginning of its days that political statehood is only one part of a nation's destiny. National freedom may well peter out in disillusion and despair, unless it is accompanied by a fruitful vision of economic, social, and scientific progress.

Our institute will not change its essential nature as a center for pure research in which honest scientific inquiry constitutes its own justification. But the history of our times is bound to knit Rehovoth more closely into the fabric of Israel's national life. Similarly, the Institute is certain to become increasingly "internationalized" in response to the impulses which determine Israel's role in the world. And Israel's role in the world is primarily one of reconciliation between religion and science; between the old inheritance and the new potentiality; between the contrasting possibilities of salvation and disaster embodied in the newly discovered sources of power; between the national freedom of Asia and Africa, and the science and democracy of Europe and America.

It might have been possible to envisage a State of Israel without the existence of a center devoted exclusively to fundamental scientific research. Even today there are more than fifty states which live, work and survive without the special grace which Rehovoth confers upon our society. But no one can doubt that Israel without the Weizmann Institute of Science would lack one of the major dimensions of its national and international personality.

It would have been incongruous if the people which was the first to be haunted by the question of purpose and direction in the life of nature and of man, were not now to be centrally involved in the quest for the great answers. The quest may be unceasing. There is no mystery in nature the solution of which does not open the road to a mystery greater than itself.

There comes a point when the scientist, examining the origin of natural forces, finds himself staring helplessly into the void. His helplessness becomes most profound when he seeks to define, let alone explain, the meaning and nature of life. But the more he pursues the quest, the more constantly will he be elevated by what Whitehead once called "the habitual vision of greatness." It was in this land after all, that this vision was seen in its first, most durable radiance.

MAYOR OF N. Y. BARS AMERICAN NAZI PARTY RALLY

Three Democratic City Councilmen filed a resolution urging Park Commissioner Newbold Morris to deny the Nazi group a permit to meet. The Councilmen, David Ross, Daniel S. Weiss and Louis Okin, planned to introduce the resolution which contended that "the American Nazi party admittedly is a group seeking to further the hated and discredited practices of the Nazi party as it existed in Germany."

The New York Civil Liberties Union, however, urged that a permit be issued on the ground that denial of such permission would violate constitutional rights of free speech and assembly. George E. Rundquist, the group's executive director, said: "This position is consistent with our traditional defense of free speech, despite the fact that the groups or individuals under attack are abhorred by the majority of the community." A similar position was taken by the Emergency Civil Liberties Committee, of which Clark Foreman is executive director. Mr. Foreman said he had notified Mayor Wagner to this effect.

In a letter to Mayor Wagner, Representative Emanuel Celler, of Brooklyn, cautioned that "a riot danger exists." He told the Mayor that George Lincoln Rockwell, head of the Nazi party, "has caused public disorder and turbulence in Washington, D. C., and should not be permitted to repeat his disgraceful conduct in our city."

A group of fifteen students under the banner of the Committee to Combat Prejudice picketed City Hall for two hours protesting the issuance of a permit, says the New York Times. Joining in protests to the Mayor and other officials were the Jewish War Veterans of the United States of America, the New York Jewish Conference, the Workmen's Circle, the Emma Lazarus Federation of Jewish Women's Clubs, the Zionist Organization of America, the Auschwitz - Buna Memorial Scholarship Fund, and the Committee to Stop Revival of Nazism and Anti-Semitism.

A State Supreme Court justice granted an order restraining Park Commissioner Newbold Morris from issuing a permit to the American Nazi party to conduct a political rally in Union Square Park on July 4. Justice Louis L. Friedman, sitting in Brooklyn, directed that a hearing on a permanent injunction be scheduled for the Manhattan Supreme Court. This action was brought before Justice Friedman by State Senator Frank J. Fino and Assemblyman Irwin Brownstein, Coney Island Democrats, as taxpayers. They said the issuance of a permit would violate the City Charter.

In a four-page decision, Justice Friedman warned that if the rally were permitted to take place, there would be "bloodshed, violence and riot under our very eyes." It would be impossible, he wrote, for the police to stem the riots.

"Ordinarily no injunction should be preliminarily granted without opportunity to the adverse party to be heard," Justice Friedman wrote. "In this instance, no permit should be issued by the Park Commissioner until at least real and true Americans have had an opportunity to air their views."

In a letter to Police Commissioner Stephen P. Kennedy the American Jewish Congress asked that the Police Department be ready to arrest George Lincoln Rockwell, head of the Nazi party, if he "incites to riot or violence during the rally". Dr. Joachim Prins, the Congress' president, conceded Mr. Rockwell's right to speak, but called for vigorous action if a breach of peace were created.

On several occasions Commissioner Kennedy has been queried as to what action the Police Department would take had the permit been granted to the Nazi party, reports the New York Times. Recently, Commissioner Kennedy said: "The Police Department will furnish the necessary police protection after the Park Department announces that a permit or permits has been issued."
